"In Re: Nissan Radiator/Transmission Cooler Litigation, Case No. 10-cv-07493."

Dear Honorable Charles L. Brieant Jr.:

I'm writing to say I'm in objection to the above settlement.

CV/CR
Letter
1-23-13

Nissan did not make this a vehicle recall which would have caused consumers not to have any out of pocket expenses. Instead a class action law suit had to be filed which caused consumers unnecessary and burdensome expenses through no fault of their own.

I spent a good amount of money for my Nissan Pathfinder because I put my trust in the Nissan name. Faulty part damages should not be the expense of the consumer, nor a deductible/co-pay. I bought the vehicle with trust in Nissan that it had new defective free parts on it. It's Nissan's responsibility to make sure they conduct business with a reliable part company. Why should anybody have to pay for damages or deductible/co pay caused by a company who put on defective parts? We had no control of this.

I thank you for considering this letter and my objections.

In regards,

I'm still the current owner of the 2007 Nissan Pathfinder

VIN: 5N1AR18U57C618586

Current Odometer Mileage: 86,577 miles

I have had repairs to my vehicle caused by cross-contamination of engine coolant and transmission fluid as a result of a defect in the radiator. The odometer mileage on the date of the repair was 84,558 miles.

Attached is supporting papers.

Thank You,
